

An aerial, black-and-white photograph of a busy city intersection. The image shows multiple lanes of traffic with cars and buses. In the background, there are several multi-story buildings, some with visible signage. The overall scene depicts a typical urban environment in a German city.

Measuring Air Quality and Counting Vehicles in a German city

Pia Baronetzky

A start-up measuring and predicting air pollution by

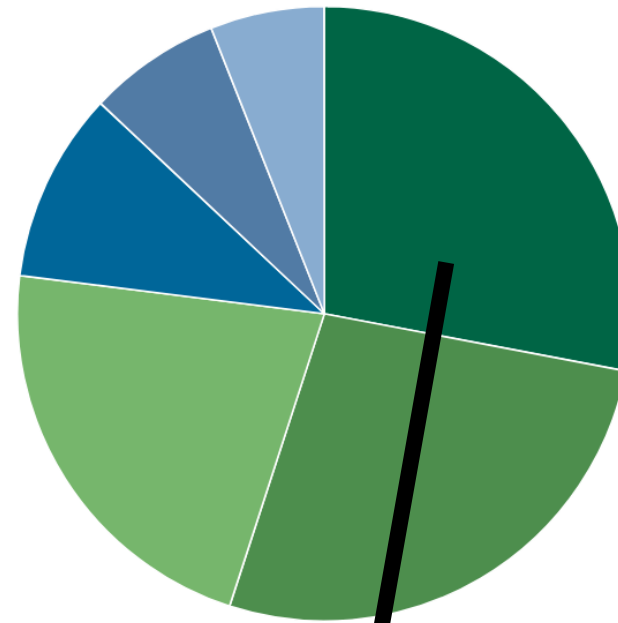

- Sensors
- Satellites
- Time Series Forecasting

My Job

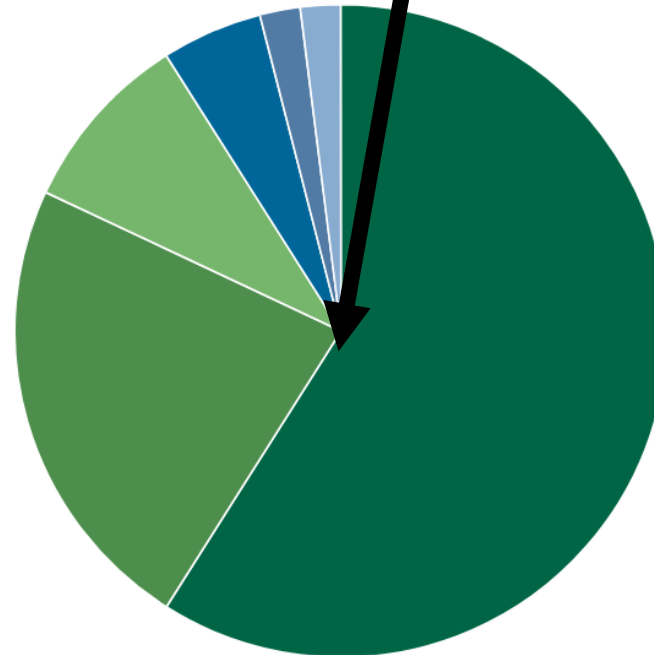

Counting Vehicles

Emissions By Type

- Transportation – 28%
- Electricity – 27%
- Industry – 22%
- Agriculture – 10%
- Commercial – 7%
- Residential – 6%

- Light-Duty Vehicles – 59%
- Medium- and Heavy-Duty Trucks – 23%
- Aircraft – 9%
- Other – 5%
- Rail – 2%
- Ships and Boats – 2%

Health Problems

